

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE.

IT is not the intention of this work to go over the ground which has now been traversed so many times by a number of able writers, nor to say anything about the history, style, or collection of the book plate.

This is simply a compilation which was begun and continued for my own use, and is now presented to my brother collectors at their request, many of them having found my manuscript useful for reference for some time past. It is hoped that in its present form it will also be of some use to the general print collector.

About twelve years ago I commenced in an interleaved copy of the Hon. J. Leicester Warren's "Guide to the Study of Book Plates" to make additions to the list of engravers and their work contained therein. But it was soon apparent that interleaving alone would not contain a fraction of the additional names that were constantly turning up.

In the year 1890 Sir Wollaston Franks, who had been keeping a similar list for some years, took the trouble to copy out for me a list of the artists and engravers which he had accumulated; this was without any names of the plates which they had executed. A glance at the two lists was sufficient to compel me to remove the whole to a manuscript volume which has been in constant use ever since.

The result is that the present work contains the names of more than 1500 artists and engravers who have signed about 5000 plates, whereas Lord de Tabley's list gives but 200, and the lists of Mr. Lichtenstein and Mr. C. Dexter Allen less than 100.

A few foreign engravers have been included in those cases where they have executed plates which come within the scope of this list, and the book plates of foreigners are also included when they are the work of British or American artists.

It is but natural that the plan conceived so long ago should show some defects now, but at that time the object was simply to add to Lord de Tabley's list, and it seemed the best to follow his arrangement; at the same time, for the sake of brevity, note was made of the owner's name alone, omitting all after the surname, such as dignities, degrees, or place of abode. The artist's signature has been copied verbatim in each entry, and this will help to identify the plate where otherwise any omission might lead to confusion.

As to the nomenclature of the styles, I have generally followed that of Lord de Tabley, except that I have called the earliest style "early armorial," a good example of which is the Sir Paul Pindar plate by the first B. Cole. This keeps the term "Jacobean" distinct for the diapered and carved furniture style, as shown in the plates by M. Cole, Bickham, and many others.

I have omitted to mention when a plate is armorial, and have used the term "Armoial" solely to describe the simple escutcheon or "plain armorial" plates, those which have no decoration about them to entitle them to inclusion in any one of the other styles.

I must claim leniency of criticism for the fourth column, which gives the dates of the book plates. This task of approximately dating the examples is one that no compiler, with the exception of Lord de Tabley, has hitherto attempted, yet I have always felt that, however roughly done, it is most useful.

Anyone referring to the lists which book plate collectors are constantly using, would be more satisfied if information as to dates were given, if only approximately within fifty years, rather than be left in doubt as to whether the plates were early or recent examples. The chief difficulty lies in dating the plain armorial plates of the present century, but even here a guess, though it may be out by twenty or thirty years, gives one a better idea of the character of the example than if no attempt whatever were made to date it.

About one-third of the plates described are in my own collection, the others have been noted from the many collections which I have been permitted to examine; but where an entry is found to be incomplete, the information has been copied from some other list, or has been supplied by collectors who have not understood my request for an exact transcript.

I desire to record the great assistance I have had from the late Sir Augustus Wollaston Franks, who for years past has given me access to his wonderful collection, and also many valuable suggestions. In fact, this list could not have grown to half its present proportions without his constant assistance and sympathy. So recently as last Christmas, when he was attacked by the illness which ended fatally, he was working through my manuscript, filling up many of the entries which were then incomplete. His death was a loss to every antiquary, no matter what his particular branch of study, and to none more than to the ardent student of book plates, for to Sir Wollaston this hobby was a recreation and a relaxation from the more important antiquarian studies in which he was engaged.

To the late Rev. T. W. Carson, of Dublin, I am also greatly indebted for much valuable assistance, even to his entrusting large portions of his fine collection to my keeping in order that I might search for signed examples. Robert Day, Esq., of Cork, has also on many occasions most kindly sent to me a number of albums containing his specimens for the same purpose.

To the Hon. Gerald Ponsonby and my old friend Mr. J. Roberts Brown I am very grateful, for they have not only given me free access to their fine collections, but they have also allowed me to use their manuscript lists of signed plates which they have noted during the many years they have been collecting.

My thanks are also due to Miss E. Chamberlayne, Sir Arthur Vicars, the Ulster King of Arms, to the Revs. F. R. Ellis and P. M. Herford, and to Messrs. J. G. Bradford, G. I. Ellis, W. Hamilton, Julian Marshall, J. Orr, G. Potter, R. G. Rice, F. J. Thairlwall, and W. H. K. Wright, and to many other members of the Ex Libris Society for their kindness in reporting signed plates, and also to those gentlemen who have readily lent their plates for reproduction herein.

To Mr. Dorman, of Southampton Row, I am much indebted, for he has allowed me to examine every signed example amongst the many thousands of book plates which have passed through his hands.

In America I am especially indebted to Mr. C. Dexter Allen and Mr. W. E. Baillie, who have given me great assistance, as well as to Dr. Dubbs, and Messrs. H. Blackwell, Pickering Dodge, F. J. Libbie, and several other gentlemen who have reported signed plates in their collections.

I shall be glad to receive reports of omissions, more especially of the earlier engravers, and of any notes which will help to fill the incomplete entries which at present exist.

HENRY W. FINCHAM.

INTRODUCTION.

UNTIL recently the book plate collector in England has taken but little heed of the artists' signatures upon the plates he has so ardently sought, placing his highest values upon those specimens which have borne a date rather than upon those which displayed the personal mark of the artist or engraver who executed them.

Why this has been so has been difficult of explanation, as it is by no means a hard task to approximate the dates of most of the plates engraved before the present century, while the signature of the executant upon the specimen should give it a double value.

During the last few years, however, many collectors have given more attention in this direction, and there are several well-known collections arranged entirely under the names of the artists in the same manner that prints are classified by the authorities of the British Museum.

The earliest signature which has at present come to light upon an English book plate is that upon the fine nameless plate of Sir Edward Lyttelton, by William Marshall, a popular engraver of portraits and title-pages of the middle of the seventeenth century. Closely following this is the portrait book plate of Bishop Hacket, dated 1670; this bears the signature of W. Faithorne, another well-known portrait and title-page engraver, who died just before the close of the seventeenth century.

Faithorne is generally credited with the execution of three other plates, all of them nameless, which are reproduced in the first series of "Griggs' Armorial Book Plates," and which represent members of the families of Gore, Hungerford, and Mariot.

David Loggan, who also engraved many portraits of this period, is known, from his own letters to the Baronet, to have engraved two plates for Sir Thomas Isham in the year 1676; the account of the wrong drawing and correction of which is so well told by Mr. W. J. Hardy in his book on book plates. Neither of these plates, however, bears the engraver's signature.

Perhaps the most important of the portrait engravers of the last century was George Vertue. He is known to have engraved several plates besides those which bear his signature. Amongst these are "Francis Brace of Lincoln's Inn, 1717," this being the year when Vertue was appointed Engraver to the Society of Antiquaries, of which Society he became later a distinguished Fellow; a charming nameless plate of Neve, in which two cherubs support the oval escutcheon, and another rather plain plate of the Earl of Cork and Orrery. The much sought after plate of the Countess of Oxford and Mortimer is, as is well known, from the graver of this important artist, for Horace Walpole in his "Catalogue of Engravers" tells of Vertue engraving "a plate to put in Lady Oxford's books."

Simon Gribelin, a Frenchman, who came to London as a young man, did a quantity of book work and several interesting book plates. Two of these were for the parochial libraries founded by Dr. Thomas Bray both in England and America about the year 1720. They are both pictorial, and bear the initials of the engraver, S.G.; descriptions of them may be found both in Warren and Hardy. Gribelin also executed three plates for Sir Philip

Sydenham, a Baronet, who had fifteen or sixteen different book plates, all of them rather scarce to collectors, as the majority of his books are to be found in the library of Sion College.

Another of the better known engravers is John Pine, who engraved the plates to record the gift of King George I. to Cambridge University; a detailed account of the execution of these plates will be found in Mr. Hardy's "Book Plates." To Mr. Douthwaite, the Librarian of Gray's Inn, I am indebted for the discovery that Pine engraved the well-known plate for that library, although he did not sign it. Mr. Douthwaite has kindly given me a transcript of the "Order of Pension," which reads as follows:—"24 Nov. 1750.—Ordered that the Arms of the Society be engraved by Mr. Pyne and that the words Gray's Inn Library be also engraved at the bottom of the Arms, and that 2000 of them be printed off and fixed in the books in the Library."

Redgrave has a short note about J. Mynde, whom he describes as a landscape painter, who was chiefly employed by the London booksellers. He signs five rather good book plates, the most important of which is, perhaps, that of the Record Office, which at that time was located in the Tower of London, the plate having been engraved about 1770, while Sir Thomas Sewell was Master of the Rolls. There are two states of this plate, the second state having considerably more shading and crosshatching about it than the first. This usually points to the plate having been worn by excessive printing, and then re-engraved to improve its appearance. Yet this plate is very scarce, but few collectors can boast of its possession, and only two or three copies are now to be found amongst the books of the Record Office.

The plate has been reproduced in Griggs' first series and in Hardy. Both of the illustrations were, I believe, made from the same specimen, which is an example of the earlier state. Mr. Julian Marshall is the fortunate possessor of copies in each condition.

There is an engraver who worked principally in the Jacobean style between the years 1720 and 1750 who signed his name with several variations. I have called him F. Gardner, but he also signs "F. Garden," and in one case "F. Gardin." His clients from their addresses appear to be mostly west of England folk, so that it is very likely that he worked in some west country town, such as Bristol or Exeter. Yet, like many another engraver of book plates, we know nothing of him except from his work, unless he is the man whom Mr. C. Dexter Allen mentions in his "American Book Plates" as advertising in the Boston Evening Post of the 4th of March, 1745, as follows:—

FRANCIS GARDEN, Engraver from London, engraves in the newest Manner and at the cheapest Rates, Coats-of-Arms, Crests or Cyphers on Gold, Silver, Pewter or Copper. To be heard of at Mr. Caverley's, Distiller at the South End of Boston. N.B.—He will wait on any Person in Town or Country, to do their Work at their own House, if desired; also copper-plate printing perform'd by him.

Lord de Tabley, at page 169 of his "Guide," says: "Certain ex-libris in our list, of the names of Jones, Jolliffe, Collyer, and Russell, are signed WH, and have been erroneously attributed to Hogarth. These plates are none of them earlier than 1745, at which time Hogarth was better employed than on such small work as this. They must be assigned to one William Hibbart, whom Bryan mentions as residing at Bath in 1750, and etching portraits in the manner of Worlidge. This W. Hibbart, moreover, signs his name in full, with this very date 1750, on the book plate of Deburgh, Earl of Clanricarde."

Mr. Hardy, in his "Book Plates," and Mr. Walter Hamilton, in his work on "Dated Book Plates," both make a similar statement; doubtless, the two later writers have accepted Lord de Tabley's assertion without question.

Now, the curious thing is that, so far as I know, the only book plate signed by Hibbart is the Deburgh, and I can find nothing in his work that would suggest that he engraved the thirty or forty plates signed WH beyond the fact that he has the same initials.

During the time that I have been arranging the WH signatures I have become convinced that they are the work of an engraver who has also done some entirely different designs, and it is only by tracing the various forms of his signatures and the growth of his styles that one can arrive at this. I may say that I have submitted my deductions to several well-known collectors, and so far their verdicts agree with mine.

The artist to whom I ascribe these plates is William Henshaw. He appears to have had four different forms of signatures, the earliest of which, and the one that may have led to his work being ascribed to Hibbart, is a WH in script capitals. The plates with this signature, twenty-two in number, are, with the exception of one, all similar in character—a very bald and early variety of Chippendale very much like those by Mountaine. The exception to which I refer, "Thomas Hide," is a pretty festoon plate, identical with another, an anonymous "Pearce," which bears his second form of signature, the WI in ligature. I have notes of seven with this form, but they are in various styles—the early Chippendale, the festoon, and Henshaw's latest pictorial style.

The third form of signature is still W H, but in square block capitals, and here again with nine examples the same diversity of style appears.

The fourth form is the artist's name in full, W and in one instance W^m Henshaw. The lettering upon these plates, some fourteen in number, is various; in some the initials are square block letters similar to the third form, and in others they are identical with the script capitals of the earliest variety.

It is perhaps surprising that an artist who engraved these bald Chippendale plates should also have done plates like the charming little "Thomas Leman" and the "Richard Comings," a great portion of which is in stipple; and yet when we consider that the execution of these plates covers a period of about thirty years, we see the development of a skilful engraver who followed the fashion of the times, and whose methods naturally improved with his practice.

There is no difficulty in tracing three forms of his signature, as the "Heywood" plate signed WI in ligature, "John Jackson" with the square block W H, and the "Gason" signed in full, are all identical in design and execution, and the first and second forms are connected by the "Thomas Hide" and the "Pearce" plates. The initials of the full signature upon the Chippendale plate of "S. White" are also similar to the earliest form of signature. As one examines the many examples bearing these signatures it becomes more convincing that they are all the work of the same prolific engraver.

Henshaw, like Skinner of Bath and Mountaine of Winchester, has eluded all attempts made to inquire into his identity, but from the fact that many of his book plate clients were members of Cambridge University, I am inclined to believe that he worked in that city.

Sir Wollaston Franks had a scrapbook of specimens of engravings which had belonged to Stephens of Cambridge, and amongst the examples contained therein were a number of the WH and Henshaw book plates.

William Stephens of Cambridge is another important engraver of the Chippendale period. He will be found by the list to have signed a large number of book plates, and there is evidence that he engraved others which do not bear his signature.

Mr. Albert Hartshorne has contributed to the "Ex Libris Journal"* a letter of Stephens', showing that he executed the unsigned plate of "Samuel Kerrick STP," an East Anglian divine, and Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. As the letter is of considerable interest, I have ventured to reprint it. It is as follows :—

* Vol. III., page 10.

REV. SIR,—	£	s.	d.
I have sent you 800 Prints of Arms at	0	10	6
A neat Seal double Arms	1	10	0
Copper plate ditto.	0	12	0

I hope, Sir, the things will answer your Expectation, according to my Endeavours, I have done but 800 because you seem'd in doubt whether you shou'd want quite 1000 at present ; if you have any further Commands, shall take great care to please, being with all due Deference, sir,
Your very much obliged humble servt.,

WILLIAM STEPHENS.

Cambridge, 16th Sept., 1754.

The two important portrait plates of Mr. Secretary Pepys bear both the names of Sir Godfrey Kneller the painter and R. White the engraver, but the name of the artist who executed his charming little book plate with the SP monogram and the two anchors is entirely lost to us, as is also that of the engraver who executed his armorial plate with the inscription, "Samuel Pepys of Brampton in Huntingtongshire Esq. Secretary of the Admiralty to his Ma^y. King Charles the Second : . Descended of ye antient family of Pepys of Cottenham in Cambridgshire."

In connection with the SP monogram plate it has been usual to quote the entry in the Diary of July 21, 1668, where Pepys "spent an hour about contriving my little plates for my books of the King's four Yards"; but if this is read with the entry under July 27 of the same year, it will be seen that it has no reference to a book plate, but to four pictorial engravings.

One of the most famous of the last century artists who appears in our list is the Florentine, Francesco Bartolozzi, who was one of the earliest of our Royal Academicians. Yet but few, if any, of his plates are of his own design, as he usually followed the inspiration of his compatriot Cipriani, who was also one of the foundation members of the Royal Academy. Although most of the plates he executed are fairly well known by reproductions, they are all of them scarce, the best known being that of Sir Foster Cunliffe.

The Rev. T. W. Carson had in his collection a fine unsigned proof by Bartolozzi of the book plate of Sir Mark Masterman Sykes, in his usual style of cherubs supporting an escutcheon. I have not seen another copy, and am unaware if it was afterwards signed.

It is highly probable that a number of the plates by this artist were used more as visiting cards than as book plates. Pictorial visiting cards being quite the fashion at this period, and this may account in part for their scarcity as book plates.

Another foreign engraver who has executed a British book plate, is Francesco Piranesi, who signs the plate of "Mr. Menzies." He has also been credited with the pictorial plate of the "Earl of Aylesford, Packington, Warwicks." As, however, this nobleman was an amateur artist of some merit, an honorary exhibitor at the Royal Academy, and the author of a number of published etchings, it is more than likely his own work, especially as it bears no signature.

Of the famous Newcastle engravers, Thomas and John Bewick, the lists are apparently meagre ; Thomas being credited with but sixteen plates, and his younger brother John with but one. The Rev. Thomas Hugo, in his valuable "Descriptive Catalogue of the Works of Thomas and John Bewick," gives a list of about ninety, but considerable doubt has been expressed as to the authenticity of some of these, and others have been proved to be the work of some of the many imitators of Bewick. I have therefore only noticed those which bear the signature, and about which there can consequently be no doubt.

At least two of the pupils of the brothers Bewick have engraved book plates; these are Richard T. Austin and Luke Clennell. The latter, by far the more important artist of the two, has signed but one plate, that of W^m. Nicholson, but Austin is credited with five. One of these, Ann Hill, dated 1825, is reproduced in Miss Labouchere's "Ladies' Book Plates," page 68.

I am indebted for most of my biographical dates to the works of Redgrave, and Bryan and Ottley, where further details of the more important artists may be found. But readers must disregard a statement of Bryan's where he speaks of several engravers doing "portraits and other book plates" and "ornamental book plates"; here he evidently means book illustrations and not ex-libris. Bryan says of Cromek that he engraved "many of Stothard's designs for book plates." So far as I am aware, Cromek has not executed a single ex-libris, and Stothard has designed but one, that of Claude Martin, which was engraved by Birrell. It being the only book-plate known to have been designed by Stothard, I have reproduced it. As the owner of this plate was a man of remarkable character, I may be pardoned for giving a short account of him, the more so as the plate is of great rarity. The example here reproduced was given to me by Sir Wollaston Franks some years ago.

Claude Martin was born at Lyons in 1732, the son of a cooper. He went to India under Count de Lally as a private soldier, and at the siege of Pondicherry in 1760 he deserted to the British. Here he rose to the rank of captain of infantry, and upon being sent to aid in the survey of the province of Oude, he gained the appointment of superintendent of artillery to the king of that province.

Martin remained at the court of the King of Oude for more than a quarter of a century, and amassed a large fortune. On the banks of the river Goomti at Lucknow he built an enormous palace or castle in which he had a large museum and a well-fitted observatory; this is the building which appears in the background of the picture upon the book plate.

In the war with Tippú Sultan in 1790 Martin gave considerable assistance to the East India Company, and a few years afterwards was promoted to the rank of major-general. He died at Lucknow on the 13th September, 1800, and bequeathed 200,000 rupees to the city of Calcutta to found a school to be called "La Martinière."

Martin had two other book plates, one of which is inscribed "Col. Claude Martin," and the other has been reproduced in Hamilton's "French Book Plates." He also used a super-libris.

I have not ventured to write of the American artists. These have been dealt with most ably by Mr. C. Dexter Allen in his "Early American Book Plates," a pamphlet which appeared in connection with an exhibition of book plates given by the Grolier Club in 1894, and more fully in his "American Book Plates," and it would be but presumption to attempt to add anything to what he has written. These lists are probably more complete than his, but this is owing to the fact that I am indebted to him and Mr. W. E. Baillie, as well as several other American collectors, for much help, and also to my having access to the American collections of Sir Wollaston Franks and the Rev. T. W. Carson.

Doubtless American collectors will find a number of engravers in the list belonging to their country which are not so designated, as it is in many cases impossible to distinguish them without especial knowledge, only obtainable on their side. Quite a large number of the American colonists had their plates executed in the old country, and imported them with their other luxuries. Several of the earlier American engravers were men who had worked over here, and had then crossed the seas in search of better times, as in the case of Francis Garden, who advertises the fact of his arrival from London.

It would be an interesting task to attempt to trace out at what period the custom began of the shopkeeper stationer placing his name upon his customer's book plate instead of allowing the actual engraver to sign it. It certainly appears to have been prevalent as early as the beginning of the present century, and perhaps even long before. It is quite possible that a number of those signatures which we have regarded as the names of actual artists may yet be found to only represent shopkeepers who gave the work out to jobbing engravers with instructions to place their employers' names in the positions that their own should occupy.

Sir Wollaston Franks had in his collection a few proofs of book plates which bore a roughly-engraved signature very faintly cut close to the edge of the copper, the name being that of R. L. Wright. As this signature has only been found on these few proofs, they are doubtless the work of a man employed by a stationer who removed the signature, and probably engraved his own name in its place before the actual printing of the plate was proceeded with.

I have been given to understand that all the plates bearing the signature of Warwick, as well as several other well-known names, were executed by a family of engravers named Baker, of whom there have been three generations, all employed upon engraving book plates for stationers. The last of them is still busily at work manufacturing book plates for the "heraldic stationer."

To this custom must be due the decline and disappearance of the decoration of the book plate which had been so rich and varied up to the close of the last century, and the origin of the ghastly plain armorial or stationer style which became practically universal until within a few years ago.

It is only during the last thirty years or so that artistic book plates are again being designed, and again being signed by the artists themselves.

One may call to mind many signatures upon book plates of the present day which are clearly those of shopkeepers who seem anxious to pose as artistic engravers. On the other hand, such names as Sherborn, Eve, Monk, French, Hopson, and others give evidence that the best modern masters of the graver and the etching needle deign to turn some of their best efforts to the production of the book plate. While for designs which are reproduced by the various photographic processes we have such artists as H. S. Marks, R.A., T. G. Jackson, R.A., E. A. Abbey, A.R.A., R. Anning Bell, Walter Crane, and many others.

BY W. HENSHAW.

THE ARTISTS AND ENGRAVERS

OF

BRITISH AND AMERICAN BOOK PLATES

With a List of the Plates they have executed

The arrangement of this list is as follows:—In the first column, after the artist's name, the names of the owners of the plates are given as they appear upon the originals. Those within parentheses are unnamed on the plates, but have been identified as belonging to the owner whose name is given. The second column contains a verbatim copy of the signature, the third gives the style of the plate, and the fourth the approximate date. Where the plate is dated, the date appears as in the original, either with the owner's inscription or with the artist's signature.

Hogarth (William), born in London in 1697, and died 1764
Although he did not sign any book plates, it is well known that he engraved several, the most notable of which is the nameless plate of John Holland—a fine library interior found in two varieties, and the "George Lambart." Both of these examples are reproduced in the "Ex Libris Journal," vol.

Kirkwood. There appears to have been two engravers of this name practising at the same time, one of whom, the most prolific of the two, worked in Edinburgh, and the other in Dublin. As the majority of the plates they have signed are simply plain armorial, it is quite impossible to distinguish between them
